

EXPLORING THE HISTORY OF THE INMAN COMPANY AND SENIOR CENTER

At 6:00 pm, Thursday, January 24th, Historic Amsterdam League (HAL) will present the story of the Inman Manufacturing Company, Inman family, and Inman Senior Center on the center's big screen TV at 53 Guy Park Avenue, Amsterdam, NY.

The Inman Manufacturing Company purchased its first building at that site in 1874. Founder Horace J. Inman soon realized that the mechanical innovations he created to improve the making of paper boxes could be sold around the world for more profit than just making boxes themselves. The business continued into the 1980s when its assets were transferred out-of-state and its local owners donated the site for use as a senior center.

“We’re moving the date and location of HAL’s January membership meeting because the actual Inman building and artifacts found there are the best aids in telling this part of history,” said HAL President Rob von Hasseln.

Attendance is free and the general public is welcome. Refreshments will be provided. There will be a short HAL meeting before the presentation

HAL’s new Chuctanunda Creek themed Amsterdam Icons 2019 calendar and HAL other publications will also be available for purchase.
