Arterial Scrapbook Series To Be Started Next Week

Beginning next week in the Amsterdam Recorder will be a series of illustrated articles describing various phases of the arterial construction about to be started.

As the series is continued during coming months, pictures of street scenes long familiar but soon to disappear and of buildings, old and comparatively new, scheduled for demolition during the coming year, will be presented.

Many of the structures are Amsterdam landmarks, connected with community activities of former generations, and mention of them is sufficient to bring recollections.

The scheduled insertions will be labeled as "1966 Arterial Scrap Book" for easier identification, and some Recorder readers may wish to preserve memories of the Downtown-Amsterdam-That-Is by clipping and pasting for reference in years to come.

The community face-lifting of 1966 is certain to provide conversational subjects for a long time to come and the often-heard lament—"I wish I had cut that out of the paper"—will be sounded again.

For camera owners wishing to preserve their own film recollections of the Amsterdam business section that was, the Recorder may provide suggestions.

Beginning the series now in preparation by H. P. Donlon of the Recorder staff will be a couple of articles contrasting the earliest community planning and the impending remodeling.
